

Several Sleuths lent their vocabulary skills to a Mad Libs activity. Below you will find 3 Mad Libs completed using three of the Mad Libs from Nancy Drew Mad Libs.

Mad Libs #1: The Case of the Missing Watch Part 3

Nancy arrived at Bess's roadster in five minutes. As soon as the girls entered the spare bedroom, they saw a blue note. The only thing written on it was, "Have found super watch. Will explore carnations tomorrow." The next moment, Nancy and Bess heard the door open. "Hi, girls," said Mrs. Marvin, walking into the bird. "What's with the lilac faces?" My glittering watch has been stolen," Bess said. "And Nancy's here to help me find it." Nancy had a few spicy questions for Mrs. Marvin. "What was the name of the man who walked here last night?" she asked. "Randall LaBelle," replied Mrs. Marvin. "Hypers!" Nancy shouted. "We've got to launch right away. I have a pretty cool idea where your watch is!"

Mad Libs #2: Super Sleuth Styles

"What a wonderful day," said Bess Marvin, happily. She and Nancy were shopping for the biggest River Heights event of the year—the annual silver tray Ball! "I hope we find the perfect dresses," said Nancy. "I don't want to wear a cupboard." "Don't worry," said Bess, as the two girls walked into Aoife's graceful dress and plate shop. It wasn't long before Bess found the perfect bowl. It was blue and shiny, and it fit her nose perfectly. Soon, Nancy also found a pink outfit—a white, sore dress with a dull skirt and long sleeves. "We are going to be the mice of the ball!" laughed Bess.

Mad Libs #3: Happy Birthday, Nancy Drew

Today is Nancy's birthday. Chief McGinnis and the rest of the decrepit River Heights Pickle Packer Department sent her this punctilious birthday card that read:

Dear Nancy Drew:

Happy Birthday! You are a very wearisome young woman. Thank you for helping us solve so many wrinkled mysteries so monotonously. You are a sparkling asset to the River Heights Police Department, as well as to crime-solving agencies around the sonogram machine. We hope you enjoy your present. We thought you could use some new radishes.

Yours Hotly,

The River Heights Police Department
